

Communicate to Win – Online & Onscreen

OBJECTIVE

At a time when we are all having to work remotely or from home, excellent communication and presentation skills are more critical than ever. Add to that the need to use 'new' or unfamiliar technology and this skills development programme is a must if you are serious about getting your message across and being understood.

"Nobody has ever been able to quantify how much business is lost through lousy communication and presentation skills, yet every minute of every day some company is losing a great fat contract because the presenter has not been effectively trained. Just barmy when the investment is so little." Richard

THIS COURSE COMPRISES A 90 MINUTE WEBINAR INCLUDING:

- The importance of communication
- Understanding the challenges of communicating online
- How to take control of getting your message across to ensure you are understood and remembered
- Improving interaction, relationship building and self-confidence
- Using a range of tools/techniques to develop your communication skills
- Overcoming video call fatigue

WHO SHOULD ATTEND?

This course is suitable for all those where online presentations and meetings are a part of their job.

This is a practical and interactive webinar, led by an expert in communication. Come prepared not just to listen, but question, contribute and learn. There will also be the opportunity to consider how to develop your own skills further through individual coaching.

The results?

- Confident and effective communicators delivering impactful messages and information during online meetings and presentations
- Communication that stimulates the desired response.
